

After being diagnosed three different times with breast cancer since 2006, Annie continues to count her blessings. Thinking back to the day she first heard the dreadful word "cancer," Annie knew for certain her life had changed. "Today, I see through the eyes of someone who was given a second chance at life." Annie believes in the Avera Race Against Breast Cancer because she sees first-hand how funds benefit patients and families battling with cancer. Thanks to the support Annie's family and friends gave, she has hope for the future.
